Auschwitz Trial Of 24 For Mass Murder To Last Five Months Next Year

The most important trial of Nazi war criminals by a German court since the war is expected to open next year in Frankfurt, and to last from four to five months. It will involve a first batch of 24 men, charged with mass murder and atrocities at Auschwitz concentration camp. They include Richard Baer, 51, the commandant at the end of the war, who was discovered working as a forester near Hamburg in December, 1960, says the London Times. His two predecessors were executed by the Poles after the German collapse.

Dr. Hans Grossman, the first state prosecutor at Frankfurt, said that the indictment, which covered 700 pages and was based on 16 files totalling more than 16,000 documents, constituted a "catalogue of atrocities". Some 250 witnesses from all parts of the world will be called.

In addition to Baer, the state prosecutor said, the accused would include: Baer's two adjutants, Robert Mulka (53) and Karl Höcker (51); the former SS Oberscharführer Wilhelm Bogel (56), from Hemmingen, Württemberg; SS. Hauptsturmführer Franz Hofmann (57); former camp group leader Oswald Kaduk (56), from Berlin; and the leader of the former Auschwitz gas chamber commando, Josef Klehr (56).

Only 12 of the accused were at present under arrest, the state prosecutor added. Franz Hofmann had already been sentenced to life imprisonment at the so-called Dachau trials, but the others had taken their place again after the war in German society.

Two dentists and one chemist were still practising. Bogel was a salesman; Höcker employed in Lübeck as chief cashier of the town finance office; and Kaduk was a nursing orderly in Berlin, says the London Times. Seventeen others accused in the Auschwitz case, about whom investigations are still proceeding, will be tried later.

Letters Of Jews To Soviet Paper Deny Anti-Semitism

Isvestia, the Soviet Government newspaper, printed excerpts from letters by Soviet Jews denying that there was anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union. The lengthy article was the second in two weeks to dwell on the subject. On May 18, Isvestia printed a report on anti-Semitism, says the New York Times, in the United States as shown by the exclusion of Jews from some hotels and social clubs.

The publication of this material appeared to be part of a campaign to rebut charges in the West that the presence of many Jews among Soviet citizens tried for "economic" crimes such as embezzlement and profiteering was evidence of anti-Semitism.

The campaign was set in motion earlier this year with a letter by Premier Khrushchev to Bertrand Russell, the British philosopher, denying discrimination against Jews in the Soviet effort to eradicate fraud and mismanagement in the economy.

The general tenor of the letters quoted by Isvestia was that Jews were not discriminated against in any sector of Soviet life. None of the letters discussed the virtual non-existence of Yiddish cultural activities in the Soviet Union. They appeared to have been written by assimilationist Jews who had no interest in Jewish traditions.

"I never thought about the fact that I was a Jew," wrote an officer in the border guard, Lieut. Col. D. Gelfman. "I was graduated from a military school, became a Communist and was entrusted with a most honorable duty — to stand guard over our motherland."

Isvestia commented that it was precisely the desire of Soviet Jews to rid themselves of traditional isolation and become part of the [illegible] of peoples that aroused "bourgeois ideologists, Zionists, and nationalists of all breeds."

A Siberian airline pilot, G. Fridmanovitch, wrote: "Neither I nor my children ever feel that we are being treated differently from other nationalities."

Jews are regarded as an ethnic group in the Soviet Union but they lack many of the cultural oppor-

Zionist Leader Appeals To U.S. For Aid To Israel Security

The Rev. Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, Ohio, American Zionist leader, appealed to the United States Government to issue a "clear-cut" statement regarding its "deep concern for the continued security of Israel."

Such a statement, he said, must be coupled with "a word of rebuke" to the Arab Governments that "are so shamelessly threatening to destroy a peaceful sovereign state which the American Government has recognized, which it helped to bring into existence."

His address was delivered in Philharmonic Hall, Lincoln Center, in New York, at a ceremony marking the fifteenth anniversary of Israel's establishment as a nation, says the New York Times. Under the Hebrew calendar of the Fifth of Iyar, Israel's Independence Day this year was observed on April 28.

Rabbi Irving Miller, chairman of the American Zionist Council, sponsor of the event, presented its annual Louis D. Brandeis Award to Dr. Silver. The plaque cited him for his "historic services to the Zionist ideal and to the rebirth of Israel."

Since early youth, Dr. Silver, a Reform rabbi, has been active in the Zionist movement. He presented the cause of Israel before the United Nations in 1947 when he was head of the Jewish Agency Executive.

In his address, Dr. Silver, who recently returned from Israel, expressed concern over the presence of German scientists in Egypt "who are building jet fighters [illegible] Israel." He denounced "the latest attempt" of President Gamal Abdel Nasser, of the United Arab Republic, "to use hatred of Israel" as "cement for unifying the Arab world."

The Zionist leader also took issue with a statement made on April 11 by W. Averell Harriman, Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs. Mr. Harriman had expressed the opinion that removal of German rocket scientists from Egypt might cause their re-placement "by Soviet bloc personnel, equally qualified in such work, again forcing the United Arab Republic into greater reliance on the Soviet Union."

Dr. Silver said he found it difficult "to follow the reasoning of Mr. Harriman, who does not seem to be very critical of the potentially dangerous work which these German scientists are doing in Egypt." The mounting tensions in the Middle East are a threat to the peace of the whole world," he declared, reports the New York Times.

The Zionist leader was hailed in messages sent by Governor Rockefeller and Mayor Wagner. Both cited his efforts in behalf of Israel. A memorial tribute was paid to the late President Itzhak Ben-Zvi of Israel as the large audience stood for two minutes in silence.

As celebrations of Israel's anniversary were held over the U.S., the Governing Council of the American Jewish Congress censured present American policy in the Middle East as "shortsighted."

In a resolution adopted at a meeting at its headquarters, 15 East Eighty-fourth Street, the Council said that the policy was based on the premise that the United States "must purchase Arab support, almost unconditionally, as the only means of immunizing that area from Soviet influence."

At a ceremony on the steps of City Hall Mayor Wagner designated, Israel's Independence Day in New York City. Greetings from President Kennedy were read.

Premier David Ben-Gurion renewed Israel's standing offer of peace with her Arab neighbors.

He did so in an address broadcast to the nation from Haifa on the eve of the fifteenth anniversary of her founding. "Let us steadfastly and confidently continue to hold out our hand in peace", the Premier said. But he reminded the nation that Israel was "still beleaguered along the whole of our land borders in violation of the United Nations charter."

"Only two weeks ago," he added, "Egypt, Syria, and Iraq signed a treaty of union which included an article calling for the destruction of Israel."

Observing that Israel was "the only state in the world" to have

93-Year-Old Alumna Honored At Barnard College Reunion

A 93-year-old alumna of Barnard College — Mrs. Sigmund Pollitzer — sat in the place of honor at the 70th annual reunion of Barnard Alumnae. The oldest living alumna and the only living member of the first graduating class, celebrated her 70th reunion and her 93d birthday simultaneously at the reunion dinner in the Barnard Residence House, Broadway at 116th Street, New York.

Mrs. Pollitzer's class — the class of 1893 — was composed of 13 members, says the New York Herald Tribune. At various times throughout her continuously active life, Mrs. Pollitzer campaigned for Franklin D. Roosevelt; was director of guidance and placement with the Vocational Service for Juniors; and executive secretary of the Walden School.

At the age of 75, Mrs. Pollitzer turned her energies to the founding of the Encampment for Citizenship — a summer program for [illegible] at the Ethical Culture School. She served 10 years as chairman of the Encampment's board, and is now the honorary chairman.

At the reunion dinner, the alert and still active Mrs. Pollitzer had several comments on the current scene.

Undergraduates: "Today's students are not hesitating in talking [illegible] politics, religion, and sex, [illegible] were all taboo in my [illegible] generation for it. I have two children, six grandchildren, 20 great-grandchildren, with another expected soon."

A.J.C. Leader Asks U. S. To Finance New Study Into Root Causes Of Inter-Group Hostility

A prominent social scientist who called on the Government to finance research into prejudice and bigotry as part of the Government's mental-health program was Dr. John Slawson, executive vice president of the American Jewish Committee. He said that the research was urgently needed to immunize "Americans against the infectious spread of bigotry and hostility," says the New York Times. He spoke at the annual meeting of the Committee at the Commodore Hotel, in New York. Alluding to Birmingham, Alabama, he stressed the need for long-range programs aimed at "reducing the insensitivity to all kinds of [illegible] in the United States."

Dr. Slawson [illegible] that the social science [illegible] study prejudice and bigotry be included in legislation on mental health services now in Congress.

He was recently appointed by Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy to the President's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime as special adviser on Metropolitan Problems of Youth.

While hailing the Administration's use of legal powers to combat racial and religious prejudice, Dr. Slawson said that to deal with the "overt symptoms of bigotry must be joined with a program to get to the root causes of prejudice."

Government participation in scientific programs could provide the "insight and understanding to be used as tools in dealing with the explosive tensions between races and religions," he said.

Dr. Slawson called attention to large metropolitan areas where "intergroup friction has become one of the greatest domestic problems besetting America today." He pleaded for the Government to utilize the experience and knowledge of community relations agencies "in mounting a nationwide investigation of the psychological roots of group tensions."

Since the end of World War II, he said, the human relations agencies have turned from "slogans and moralistic messages" to the use of social science research to diagnose and treat intergroup tensions and conflict. The agencies today, he added, have been stressing research about specific inequalities — unemployment, housing, educational opportunities, and the use of public facilities."

He called attention to his agency's publication of "[illegible] Is Prejudice," in 1950 [illegible] said was the "first [illegible] pose on the real nature of prejudice."

In a message to the [illegible] President Kennedy [illegible] agency's programs "to alleviate tensions within and among races and religions," reports the New York Times. The President said that the Committee had provided "intelligent and persevering leadership that is needed to carry on this seemingly endless struggle."

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication in Canada privileged to carry this proud label of membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

It does laughter, is there pleasure, is there wit? Then pop the cork, pour pink DuBarry, just for the fun of it!
In the big, beautiful champagne bottle, couched in pink foiage, it's the life of any party!
DuBarry Sparkling Vin Rosé, aged in Brights wine cellars, is made from special grapes grown in the Niagara Peninsula.
Pleasant gift idea! A "Thank you" gift? What's more pleasant, more fun, than a pink-frosed-wrapped and ribboned bottle or duree of DuBarry. You'll be dazzled at the response.

Social Notes—Montreal

Mrs. H. Dorfman, 5400 Randall Avenue, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. M. Dorfman, 6752 Parkhaven Avenue, were hostesses to eighteen guests, in honour of Miss Heddy Besner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Besner, 5218 Byron Street, and the fiancee of the former's nephew Harold Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Joseph, 4917 Draper Avenue. Miss Besner wore a two-piece, blue, linen dress.

In Toronto, Ont., for the bar-mitzvah of Lawrence Simon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Terence Gold, 24 Rosseau Road, at Bnai Israel Beth David Synagogue, were: Mr. and Mrs. A. Victor, 5905 Decarie Boulevard, his grandparents; Mr. and Mrs. J. Medres, 5185 Van Horne Avenue, and Max Victor, 1782 Glendale Avenue, great-uncles, and great-aunt; Mr. and Mrs. Morrie Gartner, uncle, and aunt; and Hinda, and Aaron, 5081 Barclay Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Katz, 4970 Kent Avenue, were hosts at a luncheon, with one hundred guests present, at the Stage Coach Inn, in honour of their daughter, Miss Sandra Katz, the fiancee of Howard Kane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kane, of Miami, Florida. Miss Katz wore a two-piece, white, boucle suit, with a shocking-pink blouse. A centrepiece of white and pink carnations trimmed the table.

Mrs. Louis Veinish, 84 St. Catherine Road, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles Veinish, 3726 Kent Avenue, were luncheon hostesses at the Stage Coach Inn, for the former's granddaughter, Miss Isabelle Katz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Katz, 1561 Surrey Crescent, and the fiancee of Sydney Spilberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Spilberg, 5450 Prince of Wales Avenue. There were sixty guests present.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Gladstone, 7029 Guelph Road, celebrated the tenth birthday of their daughter, Shirley, at Miss Montreal. She is the sister of Miss Judy Gladstone; Theodore, aged fifteen years; Larry, twelve; Cindy, five; and Leila, three. Shirley wore a blue, cotton dress, with puffed sleeves; and a full skirt. Present with the above were: Debra and Janet Gladstone, and Sandra Gladstone; all cousins; and Noritte Soifer. A square, white and pink birthday cake decorated the table.

Mr. and Mrs. David Weiner, 2315 Nantel Avenue, gave a luncheon at Ruby Foo's, in honour of the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Carole; sister of Terry, aged twelve years; and of Linda, five. A centerpiece of blue snapdragons, and yellow carnations was combined with a pink and white cake for the table. There were one hundred guests at the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Saul Greenspoon, 6587 King George Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Albert Allan, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue. He is the brother of Jack, aged fourteen and one-half years; grandson of Hyman Berman, and the late Mrs. Fannie Berman; and of Mrs. Rose Greenspoon, and the late Jack Greenspoon; all of Montreal. Kiddush was observed. Then Mr. and Mrs. Greenspoon were hosts to one hundred and seventy-five guests in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Greenspoon wore a light blue, knitted suit; with a white straw hat. Dr. Solomon Frank, Rabbi, asked a blessing over the challah. The bar-mitzvah boy spoke. Yellow pom-poms and tangerine coloured carnations, and a white cake beautified the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruby Lipson, 5703 Smart Avenue, were hosts to eighty guests at a luncheon at the Stage Coach Inn, to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Sharon; sister of Avrom, aged eleven years; granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Lipson, 4200 Bouchette Avenue; and of Mrs. Anne Gross, 5703 Smart Avenue, and the late I. Gross. Mrs. Lipson wore a white, ribbon suit; and had a wristlet of white, and pink carnations. Sharon wore a pink, organza dress, which had a lace bodice; and matching lace jacket; with a wristlet of pink, and white carnations. Red roses, and white carnations, with a white, heart-shaped cake, decorated the table. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Lipson were at home to Sharon's friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolphe Stattner, 5813 Wentworth Avenue, were honoured at a dinner dance, given by their children, in honour of their fiftieth wedding anniversary, at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. There were one hundred and twenty guests. They have two sons, and daughters-in-law: Mr. and Mrs. Morris Stattner, 5618 Wentworth Avenue; and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stattner, 5508 MacMurray Street; two sons-in-law, and twin daughters: Mr. and Mrs. Bill Taylor, 5783 Rand Avenue; and Mr. and Mrs. S. Halpern, of Paterson, N.J., who were here for the occasion. A gold-coloured and white wedding cake, and gold Taliaman roses, yellow gladioli, and gold chrysanthemums beautified the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry Gotthell, 1475 Rockland Avenue, gave a luncheon at the Stage Coach Inn, with fifty guests present, to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Carole; sister of Avrom, aged eleven years; granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Shizgal; and of Mr. and Mrs. N. Solomon, of Montreal. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Gotthell were hosts to Carole's friends at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Mendel L. Kay, 2175 College Street, were hosts to seventy guests at a luncheon at Ruby Foo's to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Janice; sister of Stanley Kay; and Richard, aged six and one-half years; granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Rothstein, 4850 Maplewood Avenue; and of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Kay, 4300 Bouchette Avenue. Mrs. Mendel L. Kay wore a pink sheath which had a beaded bodice. Mrs. Rothstein wore a blue, knitted suit. Mrs. Mac Kay wore a black, knitted suit. Their flowers were corsages of white orchids. Janice wore a pink peau de soie dress, with bodice of lace. A round, pink cake, with white pom-poms and pink gladioli, decorated the table. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Kay entertained friends of Janice's.

Mesdames Sidney Spear, 1757 Hartenstein Street, and Max Corb, 4841 Barclay Street, gave a tea at Eaton's, with sixty guests present, in honour of the former's niece, Miss Theresa Becker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Becker, 4659 Earnscliffe Avenue, and the fiancee of the latter's son, David Corb. Mrs. Spear wore a beige, knitted suit. Mrs. Corb was in a grey, knitted dress. Mrs. Becker wore a three-piece, knitted suit. Each had a corsage of white roses. Miss Becker, in a white, knitted suit, had a corsage of mauve orchids. An arrangement of white and pink carnations, chrysanthemums, and gladioli, decorated the table. The marriage will take place on December 22, at Beth Hamedrash Hagadol Synagogue. Mrs. Joseph Scherer and daughter, Miss Helen Scherer, of Toronto, Ont., cousins of the groom-to-be, were here for the party.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

by evelyn kaufman

With her head turned towards me Sister Malan gently repeated her question as we walked down the wide anonymous corridor to the special ward that Thursday. "Shall I order food for you from the Kosher kitchen, Mrs. Matthews?"

I had just been admitted to the large teaching hospital for what is known euphemistically as an exploratory operation, which might or might not lead to an immediate major operation. It was midday, but who thinks of food at such a time as this, when the mind in its restlessness keeps bouncing back to thoughts that it really cannot accommodate — as yet.

"Oh, yes, Sister, that would be very nice thank you." As soon as we entered the ward Sister Malan, understanding and sympathetic, introduced me to my two roommates and chatted to us all for a while to put me at ease, then explained the hospital routines to me before leaving.

In the world of the hospital ward time acquires new characteristics, and everyone is morally entitled to talk about himself and his operations, even encouraged to do so, with as much detail as comes to mind without the risk of being thought self-centred or just a bore. So I learnt soon enough that Mrs. van Wyk (near the window) was a widow of fifty-five with two married daughters — rare stomach operation ("I had to come specially to Cape Town" she said proudly) — due to leave hospital on Friday afternoon — member of the Dutch Reformed Church — owned a large farm in the Free State where she lived alone since her husband's death eight years ago.

The first thing I had noticed on entering the ward was that she wore thick-lensed glasses that hid the expression in her eyes, making them appear secretive, and this superficial observation had further disturbed me.

Behind the door was pretty, fair-haired Mrs. Cotton, twenty-six, Church of England, who was recovering from her sixth operation — a very involved condition that I had never heard discussed in any lounge. She had a lovely curly-haired baby girl of ten months, who smiled with her two front teeth from the photograph on her mother's bedside table to cheer (and remind) us all.

My bed and age were between the two, and my peace of mind was very in-between.

I had my three-course Kosher lunch soon after I arrived, routine fare served appetisingly at the table in our ward, and I was surprised to find myself eating most of it. Then the surgeon called to welcome me, looking like the Pied Piper with his trail of students, followed in turn, soon after, by his chief assistant, the eager brand-new interne, the diffident anaesthetist, and lastly the doctor in charge of Cancer Research, all being so kind, all examining and asking questions, usually the same questions.

My mind was full of incomplete questions that were like the spokes of a wheel following each other relentlessly round and round. ("Who will look after my child if . . . ?" . . . "And David?") It was better not to be in a private room after all, and by the time the medical fraternity had all left, and we three women had become so quickly acquainted in the telescoped atmosphere of the small ward it was time to eat again!

Once more my food was well served at the table — I was still fully dressed as I was only due (to have my operation the next day at noon — and I had lemon fish (sole it was, too) with salads and rye bread, followed by creamy rice pudding and hot coffee.

Mrs. Van Wyk could not contain herself any longer. After two weeks of hospital food, and the great improvement in her health following her successful operation, she was ravenous and ready for new ventures into the interior.

"What is Kosher food, Mrs. Matthews?" I laughed, a little confused. "I'll give you some of my fish to taste." "Oh no, I can't eat your supper, Mrs. Matthews, that would not be right." "I have too much, as it is, really, Mrs. Van Wyk, and the fish is delicious. I'll make a small sandwich for you with the extra rye bread I can't possibly finish, and you tell me what you think of it."

Of course she was an instant convert — who would not be under such circumstances — and when a friend on the hospital staff came to visit me during the meal Mrs. van Wyk asked, tentatively: "Can't I have Kosher food, too, doctor?"

Dr. Harris was a sport. "I tell you what I'll do," he said brightly, "It is quite irregular, of course, but I will arrange for you to have Mrs. Matthews' breakfast and lunch tomorrow, because she will not be able to eat until suppertime, anyway." (Even medical friends are heartless.)

"Oh thank you, Dr. Harris, that will be wonderful." And Mrs. van Wyk showed more enthusiasm for tomorrow's gastronomical delights than for her intending departure. "You must give me the recipe for this fish, Mrs. Matthews" she said excitedly. "It is delicious but I won't remember the recipe if you just tell it to me, so please write it down for me in detail, will you?" "Yes, I'll do it tomorrow," I said, and we all laughed.

From Kosher food to religion was a short step, and when Dr. Harris had left and I was in bed at last Mrs. van Wyk said, with a sidelong glance at me as she nervously smoothed her hair: "Tell me, Mrs. Matthews, are the Jews like the Catholics?"

While my mouth was still open in surprise Mrs. Cotton said, blushing as she sat up: "Oh no, Mrs. van Wyk, you must be joking! We have many Jewish friends, and their religion is not like the Catholics at all! Catholics are Christians like you and me."

And there I was sitting up in bed in my new turquoise bed-jacket, with the elaborate hairdo, and freshly manicured nails (as morale boosters) eagerly expounding the tenets of Judaism (as well as I understood them) and the divergence between it and Christianity, for the edification of a middle-aged woman who had just discovered the world outside her farm and church.

I did not know I'd had it in me, and felt so stimulated by this unfamiliar conversation. Both the early and the present day Rabbis might have shuddered in their synagogues and temples but Mrs. van Wyk gave me her undivided concentration.

For Mrs. van Wyk, of course, my appearance in her life at this time was a most bewildering experience. Being closeted with a Jewess for nearly thirty-six hours, without choice, was charged with real drama and nervous excitement, and what revelations she was going to be able to make when she got back to the farm.

So I had to answer charges, good natured ones, such as: "All Jews are rich, aren't they, Mrs. Matthews? In Kranskloof where I live there's Mr. Levy. When he first arrived over thirty years ago he used to hawk vegetables in a wheelbarrow, and now he has a big station-wagon!" And such logical statements took some disproving, but I had Mrs. Cotton's intelligent, informed support, and that helped a lot.

"My mother's best friend is a Jewess, and her daughter is my best friend, too," she said confidently, adding in the same tone of voice: "Pity you won't be here tomorrow night, Mrs. van Wyk, to taste their gefilte fish. That's something!"

Nice people, the Cottons, "gentiles but nice". It really was better not to be in a private room, and only when the night sister arrived, to give me the sleeping tablet that the anaesthetist had advised, did I return, with surprise and regret, to the personal, distressing present.

Friday at 7.30 a.m. one of the non-kosher kitchen staff arrived as usual with the cutlery and serviettes for the patients, but Mrs. van Wyk said with the confidence of an old patient: "Oh, no, not for me, thank you. You can take this cutlery away — I'm having Kosher food to-day," and if I'm not mistaken I detected a new note in her voice (pride could it be?) or perhaps it was just the presence of the digestive juices working overtime, that gave fullness to her voice.

She enjoyed the simple breakfast of a boiled egg, rye bread, generous piece of cheese, and tea, as if it were a banquet. It was the commonplace cheddar cheese that did it, but the Jews got the credit for it.

"Do you know, this is the first piece of cheese I have had since I've been here, and the boiled egg, just the way I like it is such a wonderful change from the scrambled egg and flour mush we get nearly every morning."

Poor Mrs. Cotton. She had no appetite as yet, but she was pleased for Mrs. van Wyk, and I looked on like a mother watching her convalescent child enjoy that first plate of food after the fever has subsided.

Mrs. van Wyk was a very kind woman (and a very tall one, too, I realised suddenly). She climbed out of bed after breakfast especially to place on my bedside table the lucky charm she had been given before her operation by a friend in Kranskloof — a cream-coloured plastic skeleton, about two-and-a-half inches long, with hands and feet that wobble when you move it. I was very moved, too.

(I don't know how my charm squares with the injunction about graven images, but I still have it in my cosmetic purse, though it is a little battered now.)

As I was being wheeled out of the ward on the trolley at midday Mrs. van Wyk and Mrs. Cotton both said warmly: "Good luck, and don't worry, Mrs. Matthews, we are holding thumbs for you," and Mrs. van Wyk added: "Don't forget to come and see me when you are travelling in my part of the world, any one in Kranskloof will tell you the way to the farm."

The trolley moved slowly down the corridor and in the near distance I heard her say excitedly, and yes, proudly: "No thank you, I'm having the Kosher lunch, don't you remember? I wonder what it will be." I hoped it was something good.

I greeted the surgeon and the anaesthetist, or rather they greeted me, and I thought, in that remaining split second of consciousness before the hypodermic needle entered the vein in the crook of my right arm: Later on, when her palate has forgotten, would our 'differences' only antagonise . . . Or? I really must send Mrs. van Wyk that lemon fish recipe one of these days . . .

Mesdames Maurice I. Everett, and Jacob Jacobson, both of Saint John, N.B., were hostesses at the Admiral Beatty Hotel, at a kitchen shower, in honour of Miss June Everett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Everett, of Saint John, and the fiancee of Herbert Charles Leopold, son of Mrs. Leonard Leopold, of New Rochelle, N.Y., and the late Mr. Leopold. The table was arranged with yellow flowers and yellow candles in crystal holders. Mesdames Samuel I. Everett, and Barnett Jacobson poured the beverage. Mrs. Barney H. Everett replenished and the servers were: Mesdames Benjamin Budovitch, of Fredericton, N.B.; G. Larry Gross, of Toronto, Ont., cousin of the bride-to-be; Sherman J. Morrison, Garfield T. Meltzer, Mortimer Bernstein, Milton Zides; and Misses Cheryl Everett, Brenda Budovitch, Revie Budovitch, and Esther Kashetsky.

Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Goldberg, 1959 Woodlawn Terrace, Halifax, N. S., returned from Toronto, Ont., where he attended a convention.

Miss Frances Levine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Levine, of Saint John, N. B., was one of the students who were chosen to take part in the international university exchange. Miss Levine, a fourth-year student at McGill University, will study and teach at the Alliance Française Ecole in Paris during her six-week stay in Europe. The tour is sponsored by the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

Mesdames J. J. Freedman, Lewis H. Freedman, Jerry Koven, and Bernard Freedman, all of Saint John, N.B., entertained at a luncheon, at the home of Mrs. Lewis H. Freedman, Anderson Drive, in honour of Miss Sandra Laine Tanzman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Tanzman, of Sand Cove Road, Lancaster, and the fiancee of Melvin Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Brown, Charlotte Street, Fredericton, N.B.; and in honour of Miss Sharon Janet Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Cohen, and the fiancee of Charles Flam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Flam, of Chandler, Quebec. Mesdames Joseph Tanzman, I. R. Cohen, and Saul Brown, poured the tea, and coffee. Assisting in serving were: Mesdames Harry Holtzman, E. B. Cohen, Mortimer L. Bernstein, and Sherman Morrison. Mrs. Jerry Koven, on behalf of the Sisterhood of Shaarei Zedek Synagogue, presented white Bibles to Miss Cohen, and Miss Tanzman. The honoured guests and their mothers and Mrs. Brown, were presented with corsages by the hostesses. The serving table was centered with a minature bride encircled with pansies and lighted by pastel tapers in Dresden candlesticks. Mesdames Louis Levine, Harry Levine, Jack Levine, all of Fredericton, and Mrs. Nathan David, of Sydney, N.S., were among the guests.

Mrs. Richard H. Isaacs, of Saint John, N. B., visited her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Brian Green, of Port Meiner, Anticosti Island.

Mesdames Murray L. Neustader, Maurice Elman, Jack Margolian, Fred Gauvin, Barnett Jacobson, Norman Smith, and Myer Jacobson, all of Saint John, N. B., were hostesses at a tea and linen shower, in honour of Miss Sharon Janet Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Cohen, of Saint John, and the fiancee of Charles E. Flam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Flam, of Chandler, Quebec. Mesdames I. R. Cohen, mother of the bride-to-be; and Joshua Lieberman, Harry Cohen, and L Kashetsky, aunts of the bride-to-be, poured. The Mrs. Stanley Lieberman, Misses Gloria Jacobson, Phyllis Green, Leslie Isaacs, and Janet Goldstein were their assistants. Spring flowers in silver bowls, and lighted tapers in silver holders adorned the table.

Mrs. Samuel Cohen, 89 Elliott Row, Saint John, N. B., entertained at a luncheon in honor of Miss Sharon Janet Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Cohen, 61 Orange Street, and the fiancee of Charles E. Flam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Flam, of Chandler, Quebec, prior to their marriage. Members of the immediate family were present. Covers were laid for twelve. Spring flowers decorated the room.

Mrs. Leon Kofman, and her daughter, Mrs. Philip Gibson, of Montreal, Quebec, were in Saint John, N. B., for the marriage of the former's niece, Miss Sharon Janet Cohen, daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Cohen, to Charles E. Flam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Flam, of Chandler, Quebec.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

SHERMAN-STERN

The marriage of Miss Janet Sharonne Stern, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Stern, 4979 Fulton Street, to Donald H. Sherman, son of Mrs. Helen Sherman, 114 Dunblaine Avenue, Toronto, Ont., and the late Joseph Sherman, took place at Chevra Kadisha-Beth Jacob Synagogue, on Sunday, May 26, at six o'clock. Rabbi David Roth officiating, assisted by Cantor Joshua Rosenswelg, and Reverend A. Greenberg. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in white peau de soie, re-embroidered with lace, and embellished with seed-pearls, and lustre beads; and designed with a bateau neckline; short sleeves; and bell-shaped skirt terminating in a chapel train. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion was combined with a crown of seed-pearl-beads and crystals. She carried a prayer book adorned with white orchids, and stephanotis. Miss Sharon Sherman, sister of the groom, was maid of honour. Her turquoise-blue gown of peau de faille was appliqued with Guipure lace, and matching beads, and had a scooped neckline; and bell-shaped skirt. She had a matching crown; and carried a nosegay of blue-tinted and white chrysanthemums. Robert Sherman was his brother's best man. Michael Stern, aged sixteen years, brother of the bride, was junior best man. The ushers were: Mervin Rosenstein, cousin of the bride; David Grader, cousin of the groom; Jerry Capler, Sydney Zionce, Bernard Bornstein, Harvey Gardner, Daniel Klinger, Bernard Shanack, Gerald Nackell, and Harry Teperman. Standards of turquoise-blue, and gold-coloured chrysanthemums, and gladioli, and matching tapers decorated the Synagogue. An orchestra played the wedding music. Two hundred and eighty-six guests were received at the reception in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Stern, mother of the bride, wore a white and turquoise-blue lace gown, with a chiffon bodice edged with lace, which had a scooped neckline; and cap sleeves; and an iridescent blue, chiffon skirt designed in tunic style, with a flared overskirt of white lace, scalloped at the hem. Her hat was of matching, blue, chiffon petals. Mrs. Sherman, mother of the groom, was in a long gown of gold-coloured, peau de soie, appliqued with Alencon lace, and matching beads from the left shoulder down the front, with back, draped panels from the waistline to the floor. Her hat matched in colour. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sherman spent their wedding trip in Nassau, W.I., and Miami Beach, Florida, the bride departing in a navy-blue, cotton, knitted suit; and a white orchid corsage. They have taken up residence in Toronto, Ont. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherman, of Oshawa, Ont., brother and sister-in-law of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stein, and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Zuker, of Niagara Falls, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Issie Grader, and David Grader, of Toronto, all uncles, and aunts of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. James Grodsky, of Silver Springs, Maryland, uncle, and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. H. Mulstein, cousins of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Bornstein, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kosineta, Mr. and Mrs. Leon J. Kugler, Mrs. Fannie Darvid, Jerry Capler, Sydney Zionce, Daniel Capler, Bernard Shanack, Gerald Nackell, Harry Teperman, David Fox, and Miss Shirley Bastien; all of Toronto.

Strasbourg, Generous Welcomer Of Refugees, Hopes On

BY LOIS HACKETT, OF THE JOINT DISTRIBUTION COMMITTEE

This Rhine city of Strasbourg, France, harbors a Jewish community of 2,500 families who met the influx of Algerian refugees last summer with a heart-warming burst of generosity. As early as January, 1962, the community organized a Committee of Welcome to receive the repatriates. In June, when the Algerian powder-keg exploded, the community opened its heart, its homes, and its pocketbook to the refugees. An emergency campaign raised $45,000; at the same time, the community appealed for help to the Fonds Social Juifs Unifié (French Jewish welfare agency), which, in partnership with the Joint Distribution Committee, had established a Common Fund to aid North African Jews in France. JDC's funds are provided chiefly by the United Jewish Appeal.

Now, nearly a year later, Strasbourg's leaders are working soberly and patiently to solve the complex problems created by the overnight influx of 2,000 newcomers into a community of some 10,000. Some problems, housing, jobs, relief, Strasbourg faces in common with other French Jewish communities which have received newcomers in far greater numbers. But two are unique to Strasbourg: the absorption of four to five hundred "oasis Jews" from the primitive Arab villages of Southern Algeria; and the care of a hundred children still separated from their parents (another hundred have already been reunited with their families).

While justifiably proud of what they have achieved so far, Strasbourg Jewish leaders view the future with foreboding. "Last winter was hard, but next winter will be worse," members of the Welcome Committee say. First, there is the imminent cut-off in the government's special subsidies to the repatriates. There is also an impending deficit in community funds and a growing uneasiness among those of the new arrivals who have still not adjusted to life in France.

Why did the Jews of Strasbourg make such an exceptional effort on behalf of the Algerians? "Because all of us in Strasbourg know what it means to be refugees," one man said. He explained that in 1940, before France fell to the Nazis, everyone in a strip twelve miles wide along the German border, including the Jews of Strasbourg, was evacuated by the government as a protective measure. Even so, many of them ultimately met death at the hands of the Germans.

Made up of men in their 40's and 50's, the Welcome Committee is strongly supported by the new president of the Jewish community, a lawyer named Rene Weill, who is a survivor of Auschwitz camp. The chairman of the Committee is Dr. Joseph Weill, not related, president of the regional Consistoire (the French Jewish religious organization).

While funds from the special campaign and a grant from the FSJU-JDC Common Fund were enough to cover immediate needs, the community must now find funds to maintain and operate the new services created for the North African newcomers. It is anticipated, in fact, that the annual budget will have to be increased from $80,000 to $120,000. This is a worrisome prospect, even though Strasbourg is somewhat better off than many other Jewish communities in France.

Prosperous and traditionally religious, the community has long supported a comprehensive group of Jewish institutions. It prides itself on the fact that nowhere else in France can a Jew live such a rich and intense Jewish life. This is one reason, in fact, why so many Algerians have come here. However, although this structure has been substantially expanded to meet the needs of the newcomers, existing facilities are badly overcrowded.

The Welcome Committee created two new youth homes for the unaccompanied children; a social worker was added to the staff of the Assistance Sociale Juive; new teachers and administrative personnel were found for the Hebrew school, whose enrollment has jumped from 300 to 450; a school bus service picks up the children from outlying districts; a new synagogue-center is under construction in an area where there is a high concentration of North African Jews so that they will have a place to meet and to worship.

Fortunately, two special classes, created to help the Algerian youngsters catch up educationally to their French contemporaries, have been subsidized by the local government which in other respects also has been generous in its support.

As elsewhere in France, finding work and housing for the repatriates has not been easy. Of the 2,000 newcomers to Strasbourg, it is estimated that roughly 15 per cent were well-to-do, or even rich, back in Algeria; 20 to 25 per cent were in moderate circumstances, and the remainder were poor. There are still some forty families, representing over 200 people, or ten per cent, without decent housing or jobs. Those who worked as civil service functionaries have been placed by the government in equivalent jobs. Since the accepted "image" of a Jew in Strasbourg is that of a doctor, lawyer, professor, etc., it still comes as a shock to a Strasbourgeois to find Algerian Jews serving as policemen or behind the counter at the post office.

Former businessmen or shopkeepers have taken jobs with which they are not very happy. However, it is difficult, if not impossible, for a former shop-keeper to set himself up in business again.

A few of the young adults have been placed in the accelerated courses which the government has established to re-train repatriates (the local ORT school is only for young people), but most of them lack the educational background to take technical courses. Others have been able to get menial jobs but these pay so little that when the special government allowances to repatriates end in July, it is hard to see how they will support their large families.

No one in Strasbourg dares to predict how many will turn to the community for help after this cut-off date. Seventy-five families have already been added to the monthly caseload of the Assistance Sociale Juive.

The degree of the newcomers' Europeanization corresponds to their place of origin and shades off as one goes south from Algiers. For this reason the "oasis Jews" have presented particular problems of adjustment. They lived among and like the Arabs in a little world whose horizons might be no more than a mile wide and whose landmarks were the synagogue, the school, and the kosher butcher. No electricity, no running water, no beds, chairs, or tables. Since the women, especially, had no contact with the "French" world, they speak only a Judeo-Arabic dialect.

They were a bizarre sight when they arrived in the Strasbourg railroad station last summer, wearing flowing Arab garments. While they have since been provided with European clothing, the bandanas around their dark hair and the gold rings in their ears give them the look of gypsies. Their volatile temperaments were a little frightening to the Strasbourg women volunteers; at the drop of a hat they would burst into tears or flame into anger, the storms passing, to be sure, as quickly as they came.

Among the Jews from the South are ten families, numbering some 70 people, who have not yet been able to find housing and are still living in an annex of a municipal youth hostel which the Welcome Committee and the local government set up as a reception center. This is not just a matter of money. In one family there are three adults who are all working. Building was held up in Strasbourg for several months because of the exceptionally severe winter. In any case, the families are so large, in one there are eleven children, that the small new modern apartments under construction are inadequate. In the older buildings the landlords turn them away because they don't want children.

So they are still there, a whole family jammed into one room, their belongings still packed in suitcases and bundles. The women do their cooking in a common kitchen with three small gas stoves; their laundry is strung across the ceiling of the common wash-room. It is better now that spring has come and the weather is warm. The children can go out and play in the field around the hostel.

From the beginning, the community has made a special effort on behalf of the children. In this the emphasis has been not only on education but on Jewish education in particular; it is felt that giving them the emotional security of a strong Jewish life will go far to counteract the traumatic effects of their experiences in Algeria. In addition to the 150 new children who attend the Hebrew day school, nearly 100 North African youngsters attend religious classes on Thursdays and Sundays, along with 450 "settled" children.

Some 200 children were sent ahead by their families and arrived in Strasbourg last May and June. Upon arrival, private families took them into their homes. In the meantime, summer camps were quickly organized to tide them over the summer. By fall, half of them were able to rejoin their families. Of the remaining hundred, it was possible to place some in existing children's homes in town, including the ORT boarding-school. However, two new homes had to be created, one for 40 small children, the other for 20 adolescent boys, both in villages some distance from Strasbourg.

The Committee anticipates that at the end of the school year more of them, especially the younger children, will return to their families with whom contact has been maintained and who are now more or less settled. However, some 80 families are still in Algeria or not yet settled. Also, the parents of some older boys have indicated that they want them to continue receiving the advantages of living and going to school in Strasbourg.

For both the boarders and the children whose families have settled in Strasbourg, this has been a transition year. Without exception, the children's schooling had suffered in Algeria, not only from disruptions but also from lower standards than in France. Except in cases of great age disparity, most of the Algerian youngsters were somehow absorbed into existing classes, though at a somewhat lower level than normal for their age group. Only 80, mostly "oasis" children, were found to need special classes; it is expected that by fall these too will have caught up.

Today the Strasbourg picture is one full of hope. But the Welcome Committee sees no quick solution to the problems. "It would be a serious mistake to think they will all be solved in a year," one man said. "It will take ten years, at least, maybe a generation."

QUEBEC — ONTARIO — THE MARITIMES

ENCOUNTER IN A KIEV PARK

BY DR. ROBERT H. BRUTMAN, OF BALTIMORE, MARYLAND

"Now that our guide has left, how about taking a little walk on our own?"

"O.K.," said my wife. "Let's walk around the corner where we saw all those shops. Let's get some idea of Kiev without a guide."

We left the Grand Hotel lobby, walked downhill to the corner, and turned into the shopping street. There were no display windows, and we had to peep or walk into the various stores to see what they were selling.

"This is the longest block I've ever seen. Let's cross the street and go back on the other side," I suggested. She agreed and we started back.

"Look into this court," I said about midway in the block. "Looks like a lot of apartments for the poor."

"Yes, but don't go in." My wife was fearful. "Maybe we are not allowed in there."

It was a warm day, and the walk was tiring. We reached a parkway, with a big statue of Lenin fronted by concrete benches.

My wife stopped. "How about sitting down awhile before we climb the hill back to the hotel?"

"I'm with you. How about sitting here?" I led her to a bench. "We can face the street and watch the people go by."

There were similar benches on the center walk, and I glanced about to see what companions we had.

Near us was a man doing something which irritated me greatly. He was cracking nuts with his teeth. He would fail every time he tried to break the nut on the concrete bench with his hand. Then he would stick it into his mouth, place a hand under his jaw, and the shell would break.

I winced every time he broke one, until finally I submitted to my emotions. He was close enough for a mild snap of the fingers to catch his attention.

"Nyet! Nyet!" I reprimanded, as I shook my head negatively and wagged an index finger.

He was about thirty, light-haired and red-cheeked. He was hatless, had a soup-bowl haircut, and was powerfully built. He wore a checkered sport jacket, white sport shirt, and was better dressed than most of the people I had seen.

He smiled faintly and said something to me in Russian. I did not understand him, but thought I caught a Yiddish word.

"Zeit ser a landsman?" I asked in that tongue. "Are you a countryman?"

"Da," he answered in Russian, and then continued in Yiddish. "I live in Kiev." He moved a little closer to us.

"Forgive me for criticizing you for cracking nuts with your teeth." I am a dentist and I don't like to see that because you can ruin your teeth."

"Nyet, I have strong teeth and always break nuts with them. We Russians are strong." Saying this, he cast his eyes to the right at a man who was sitting nearby.

I felt that my landsman's last sentence was loud enough to be intended for the other man. The latter was probably in his early sixties. He, too, was hatless, in a short-sleeved shirt, and no jacket. He sat alone, looking about, and darting frequent glances at us.

"Have you lived here long?" my wife asked.

"All my life," was the reply. "Tell me, is it true that in America you have found a cure for cancer?" He asked this in a low, deep, baritone voice.

I was watching the second man, and was sure he was sliding closer and was straining to overhear our conversation. We had been told by tourists that it was wise to watch your tongue, because you never know who might be listening. We had also been warned that our rooms might be wired.

"No, we don't have a cancer cure. I wish we had," I told our new friend. "Do you have a family?"

"Yes," he said, rolling his eyes a couple of times toward the stranger and back to us. Now he whispered, "My family was wiped out." Then he raised his voice a bit. "I am married and have a wife and two children. I work near here but I live in another part of the city."

I watched the second man as well as I could, and felt more and more that our landsman was justified in his apparent suspicion. I realized that I would have to be careful. Certainly I did not want to say or do anything that might get him in trouble.

"What kind of work do you do?"

"I am an upholsterer," he answered, with covert glances.

"Do you make a nice living?" I could not help asking questions. I tried to avoid anything controversial because of the eavesdropping stranger.

The question caused our man to fidget, glance to his right and then wink at us before he said, "I can't complain. I make a living and there is plenty of work. The government sees to it that we have no unemployment."

This may have been true, but I suspected that what he said might have been for the benefit of the man who seemed to be a secret service agent.

"I want to ask you a question and if you can't answer it, just forget about it. I don't want you to say anything wrong." I kept my eye on our neighbor and spoke low. "How are the Jews being treated here?"

Our landsman arose, stood close to us, winked, and put a finger vertically across his lips. "The Jews are treated well. We have a synagogue and anyone can go. Only the old people go, but we are free to do what we want about it. At least we don't have any pogroms."

It was quite evident that I had overstepped the bounds of discretion. Our friend winked again and said, "Why don't you take a ride out to our beach? It is very beautiful. Get the bus right here, for only three kopecks, and you can come back to the same place."

We rose, shook hands with the young Russian, and wished him well as we parted. Then we sat down again and just looked at each other.

For a moment I had forgotten about the secret service man. As I looked across to where he was sitting, he got up and sat down beside me. He was thin and white-haired. His sallow skin, high cheekbones and heavy, dark-framed glasses mixed my feeling of fear with unexpected sympathy when he was close to us.

"Sir and madam, I hope I am not intruding," he said in perfect Yiddish. "You are American, I believe?"

"Yes," I admitted, not knowing what to expect next.

"I understand that you have discovered a cure for cancer in your country. Is it true?"

My wife and I glanced at each other quickly, and I said, "No, we have not." It was a peculiar way to start a conversation. Had he overheard our landsman? Yet he seemed sincere, and his manner was warm.

"Sir," he said, "I thought it was only a rumor. The United States would not withhold such information from the rest of the world."

So far he was on our side. This might be a trick, but I became more curious than afraid. I was going to find out what this was all about.

"Do you live in Kiev?" I asked.

"Yes sir, I do," he replied. "I've lived here since I served in the First World War. During the second war I made uniforms for high-ranking officers. My work is tailoring."

"Are you a family man?" I inquired.

"Yes, sir." He hesitated and looked around the bench. No one was near us. He continued, "Most of my family were murdered. But I have a wife, a daughter, a son-in-law, and a grandchild."

"Dressed as comfortably as you are, you must live close by."

"Yes, sir, I do. Halfway down the block is a court. We have a two-room apartment there."

"You mean that all of you live there?" I asked.

"Certainly. That is not bad for our crowded city. Three of us go to work. My wife stays home with the baby. My wife is also coming out for some air and will be here any minute."

"Are you Jewish?" I asked bluntly.

"Yes, indeed," he answered. "But I attend services during the High Holidays only. The synagogue is too far away to go there often."

By now I was convinced that the man had not been spying. He looked around the bench again. There had been no newcomers and he went on.

"Sir and madam, will you please do me a great kindness? I have a brother in the United States. He lives in Washington and is sixty-three years old. He is a surgeon and his name is Hershel Greenbaum. We have lost contact with each other for years and maybe he could help us. He surely believes that we have all been killed. Please try to locate him and tell him his brother is still alive."

He heaved a deep sigh, looked up and said, "Ah, here comes my wife. Here I am, Hannah! Come here and meet this couple from America."

Mrs. Greenbaum was dressed in a well-worn house dress. She acknowledged the informal introduction, and sat down beside her husband. She, too, was thin and gray.

At the same moment, a tall thin man slipped into the seat formerly occupied by our landsman. By now I was sure that Mr. Greenbaum was not a secret service man. But who was this new character?

Mrs. Greenbaum began to speak. "We have been through much."

"Hannah," her husband cautioned. "Speak lower!"

"My husband has a brother in America. He does not know we are living."

Mrs. Greenbaum continued in a whisper, practically repeating what her husband had told us. I kept watch on the stranger, and saw him place a wire plug or earpiece into his ear. Was it just a hearing-aid, or was it a microphone?

"Hannah, shveig." Mr. Greenbaum ordered his wife not to speak. "Come, we must go," he said, rising in the cool shadow of Lenin. "Ver veist (Who knows)?" He eyed the stranger and winked at me.

We shook hands, and as we parted I whispered, "Mr. and Mrs. Greenbaum, I shall try to do what you ask. I'll do all I can. Goodbye and good luck. Stay well."

As my wife and I were about to sit down again, I saw the newcomer sliding on the seat in our direction.

GERMAN REPORT SHOWS FEWER NAZIS; MORE NAZI PARTIES, PUBLICATIONS, INTERNATIONAL EFFORTS

Membership in West German Nazi and anti-Semitic groups dropped from 56,600 in 1959 to 27,600 in 1962 but the number of organizations increased from 86 in 1961 to 112 the year following, according to a report received by the World Jewish Congress in New York. The report indicates a considerable drop in the number of anti-Semitic incidents: 1,206 in 1960, 889 in 1961; and then down to 205 in 1962.

However, the survey notes a marked increase in the number of anti-Semitic and Nazi publications, as well as series of international endeavors to increase secret rightist concentrations in Germany.

The report, prepared by Hermann Hoecherl, the West German Minister of the Interior, shows: (1) There is practically no rightist-radical movement in the Federal Republic. (2) The significance of the few existing small groups of extremists is dwindling. (3) Rightist radicalism in Germany does not represent a threat to the substance of the democratic order of society.

The Minister based these conclusions on the following considerations: a) In every election in which rightist parties participated in 1962, they never obtained more than 0.1% to 0.4% of the votes. b) Rightist organizations' membership continues to drop. All such groups together numbered 56,000 in 1959; 35,000 in 1961; and 27,600 in 1962. These figures include right-wing student and other youth groups, whose membership dropped from 2,300 in 1960 to 1,000 last year. With dwindling membership, internal dissension split right-wing groups, so that the 86 known groups in 1961 had mushroomed to 112 in 1962.

Mr. Hoecherl's report notes the numerical development of known anti-Semitic incidents. For instance, there were 40 in January, 1959; then 20 in June, 1959. But the smearing of swastikas on a synagogue at Christmas of that year set off an epidemic of incidents numbering at their height as many as 500 in one month.

Three months later, they had dwindled to 70; went as low as 25 in October, 1960; then spiraled as the Eichmann trial opened in April, 1961. This new increase gradually lost its impetus, returning to a "normal" of below 20, in September, 1961. Since then the monthly number has never exceeded 25, and reached an all-time low of less than 10 in December, 1962.

A breakdown of incidents in 1962 shows: six cases of cemetery desecration; 62 swastika-smearing attacks; 75 threats or insults; 28 cases of Jews being molested by anonymous calls or letters; 45 cases of anti-Semitic remarks in private discussions.

The study reports that 119 persons were identified in connection with these anti-Semitic occurrences. This is the age group pattern: five children below 14; 16 youths under 20; 31 persons between 20-30; 21 between 30 and 40; 19 between 40 and 50; 20 between 50 and 60; and 9 over 60.

Most of the perpetrators were identified as being in the lower social strata, some of them with a criminal record, others unemployed by choice, and 12 being of unsound mind. Twenty-three per cent of the perpetrators were identified as having extreme Nazi views; 38% as being anti-social; and 25% as being boisterous youths working off aggressive tendencies.

Insofar as the structure of right-wing organizations is concerned, Mr. Hoecherl states that as of December 31, 1962, he knew of: 15 parties; 19 youth organizations; 46 other organizations; and 32 independent publishers of Nazi and anti-Semitic materials. The rise and fall of such groups and publishers is indicated by the fact that 37 new ones cropped up in 1962 and 11 disappeared during the same year. The total of 27,600 extreme rightists is distributed as follows: about 11,500 in parties; 995 in youth organizations; 14,900 in other organizations; and about 200 are independent publishers.

There was considerable fluctuation in the number of parties. Of the listed 15, eight were established in 1962. In all, the parties lost 800 members that year, while about 2,800 omitted to pay their membership dues.

There was a 50% drop in the membership of Nazi youth organizations in 1962, due to a ban on some of the larger groups and the disappearance of others. The present 1,000 total membership is the lowest since the end of the war. Only four of these youth groups are reported to have more than 100 members.

MORGAN'S TO BUILD SERVICE CENTRE IN LACHINE

A modern, new $2,500,000 Service Centre for Henry Morgan & Co. Limited will be built on a 20-acre site on 23rd Avenue in Lachine, it was announced by E. W. H. Brown, President of the Company. Tenders for the 285,000 square foot warehouse will be called in June and the estimated date of occupancy is January, 1964. Mr. Brown stated that the new service building, which will be more than twice the size of the present warehouse, is part of a long-term expansion programme for Morgan's in Montreal.

With a staff of 180, the new building will offer the advantages of concentration of important non-selling services in one centralized area: General warehousing, receiving from shippers, opening and marking, and shipping to the Main Store on Phillips Square and other Morgan's retail units in the Montreal area. Appliance and furniture workshops will be located in the Service Centre and a delivery service for customer merchandise. The building will include a cafeteria and lounge and other staff facilities.

I hate to admit it but...

my brother-in-law is a 'shlemiehl'

My brother-in-law, Joe, is the sweetest man I've ever known. I love him. I love his wife; she's my sister. I love their two boys. That's why it pains me that Joe can't make a living. He works hard and he's not stupid. But he just closes his ears and his eyes to life's realities. Isn't that one way of describing a "shlemiehl"?

Joe has the most fantastic explanations for the fall-off in his business. His favorite is the weather. It's too hot or too cold; it's too rainy or too pleasant. Spring came early or it came late. Joe gets lots of customers at his neighborhood restaurant and luncheonette; the trouble is that far too many of them fail to return. What's the explanation? Don't ask Joe. He might tell you that it's the Cold War —he'll never admit that it could be cold soup.

And his wife is worse than Joe.

"Abe," she says to me, "don't talk business to Joe tonight. He's had a hard day. This isn't the right time." (No time seems to be the right time.)

"Abe, don't get excited," she says to me. "It's not good for your heart." (Believe me, it's worse for my heart when I hold things inside of me.)

"Abe," she says, "Mamma is coming for dinner. "Don't spoil the atmosphere."

Well, I did spoil the atmosphere. I talked up. I mentioned what I thought was a relatively easy subject to discuss.

"Joe," I said, "whenever I eat in a good restaurant, whether it's an expensive establishment or a successful diner or hamburger stand, I notice one thing. They all serve Heinz Ketchup. In your restaurant, you try to save a few cents; you serve another kind. It's good ketchup," I hastened to add as I saw Joe's sad expression. "Yes, you serve good ketchup, but not the best. Surely your customers must notice."

Joe took a pill out of his pocket, gulped it down furiously, and gave me one of his typical irrelevant answers:—

"Abe, what do you want of me? I run a little neighborhood luncheonette. I'm not Grossinger's."

"That's just the point," I answered. "You must act like Grossinger's—in the ketchup department, that is. All over the world Heinz is the best-selling, most popular ketchup. As things stand now, when customers eat at your restaurant, you almost announce that you are saving the few extra pennies that they, themselves, spend for ketchup in their own homes. Joe," I pleaded, "don't lead with your chin. People are influenced by little things. They don't stand up and make a speech when they're displeased. They don't write you poison pen letters. They just go somewhere else to eat."

I call that good advice! But did you change Joe? Well, that's the way I changed him. My dear brother-in-law reminds me of that classic Jewish story, "die vier okshonim," the four stubborn men.

I wish the ketchup problem was the whole trouble with Joe. It's not. It is merely an example. However, my hands are tied and I'm afraid that my tongue is tied, too.

Anyway, thanks for "listening" to my tale of woe. To reward you for your patience, I want to send you a mimeographed copy of the "vier okshonim" story (in English, of course) just in case you have never heard that very funny satirical tale.

You can reach me by addressing a postcard or letter to Abe B., Box 381, Leamington, Ontario. It's the only address you need; I have made all the necessary arrangements with the Post Office. You see, I don't want to use my real name. Why should I add to Joe's miseries?

Social Notes—Toronto

Zalman Weinstein, of Bahia, Brazil, is visiting his brother and sister-in-law, Cantor and Mrs. Sholom Weinstein, 15 Carhartt Street. Cantor Weinstein had not seen his brother in forty-one years. Cantor and Mrs. Weinstein are leaving shortly on a trip to Israel, to visit his brother-in-law, and sister, Mr. and Mrs. A. Malkin, for a month.

Mrs. Louis Pommer and daughter, Miss Enid Berk, of Hollywood, Florida, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Waxer, 1 Marquette Avenue; and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kates, 595 Brookdale Avenue, for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Shute (nee Beatrice Galler), 137 Waterloo Avenue, were in Montreal, Quebec, for the funeral of her brother, Mark F. Galler, 5400 Randall Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Stern, and his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. I. Stern, of Montreal, Quebec, visited Mr. and Mrs. A. Nakman, 131 Lyon Avenue; and were present at the marriage of Miss Katie Himelfarb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Himelfarb, 3215 Yonge Street, to Allan Naiman, son of Jacob Naiman, of Toronto, and the late Mrs. Naiman, at Torah Emeth Jewish Centre.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Zigler, and sons, David, Philip, and Ricky, 16 Garthdale Court; and Mrs. S. Teacher, of Miami Beach, Florida, formerly of Toronto, returned from Bronx, N. Y., where they attended the wedding of Miss Sheila Roimisher, to their cousin, Norman Wasserman.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Golosky, 108 Kennard Avenue, entertained her aunt, Mrs. Bessie Adler, and her daughters, Mrs. Peter Goldstein, and Mrs. Marvin Simpson, of Detroit, Mich., while they were here.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Dorsey, 127 Walmer Road, celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary, at a dinner, with fourteen guests. The host was their eldest son, Saul Dorsey. Here for the event were their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dorsey, of Montreal, Que.; and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Diamond, of New York. Their home was filled with gifts of flowers sent by their friends; and their son, and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Dorsey, planted ten trees in Israel in their honour. Gutman, of Detroit, Mich., cousins; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fenichel, of Bronx, N. Y.

MARRIAGES

FRIEDMAN-LITMAN

The marriage of Miss Barbara Litman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Litman, 266 Parkhome Avenue, to Edward Lawrence Friedman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Friedman, 473 Glengarry Avenue, was solemnized at Bnai Israel Beth David Synagogue, on May 14, at half-past five o'clock, by Rabbi Albert Pappenheim, assisted by Cantor David Greengarten. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a full-length gown of white, peau de soie. It was designed with a fitted bodice, with a portrait neckline, with inserts of Guipure lace. The bell-shaped skirt had a large bow at the back of the waist, and which placed a detachable, cathedral train. Appliques of lace were on the front hemline and on the edge of the train. Her four-tiered veil of silk illusion was attached to an open crown of cut flowers of matching lace; and she carried a cascade bouquet of three white spray orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Harvey Litman, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honour, wearing a long gown of buttercup-yellow, silk organza, over taffeta. It was designed with a fitted bodice; with the neckline rounded in the front, and V-shaped at the back. The full skirt had an inverted pleat in the back, and deep bands of Alencon lace at the hemline. She had a matching miniature pill-box hat with velvet bows, and veiling. The bridesmaids were: Misses Norma Cole, cousin of the bride; Brenda Friedman, cousin of the groom; and Gail Firestone. They wore dresses similar to the maid of honour with shorter, bell-shaped skirts; and had matching headpieces. Dianne Marks, and Bari Stern, cousin of the bride, were junior bridesmaids. Each wore a dress of white, embroidered, silk organza, over yellow taffeta; with flowing sleeves; and a square neckline; and full skirt, with a matching sash, tied in a large bow at the back. Their headpieces were circlets of yellow flowers. All the attendants carried baskets of yellow roses and daisies. Dr. Arthur Rubinoff, cousin of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Earl Rubinoff, Ronald Rubinoff, cousins of the groom; Joel Rose, Sidney Wise, and Harvey Litman, brother of the bride. The junior ushers were Thomas and Richard Levine, nephews of the groom. The decorations in the Synagogue were four standards of white and yellow chrysanthemums and gladioli, and candlelight trees, to mark the aisle. Three hundred and fifty guests were received at a dinner-reception. Mrs. Litman, mother of the bride, wore a ball-gown of golden apricot-shaded, silk chiffon; designed with a fitted bodice; semi-scooped neckline; and appliqued with crystal beads in shades of amber-tone to bronze-colour. Her headpiece was a Grecian draped coronet, with matching beading. Mrs. Friedman, mother of the groom, wore a pale, lime-green, ball gown of peau de soie; re-embroidered and appliqued with pearls; with a scalloped neckline of Alencon lace. The back panel on the skirt had an inverted pleat. She had a matching headpiece. Each carried an evening bag, adorned with Cymbidium orchids, tinted to match. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lawrence Friedman spent their honeymoon in Jamaica, W.I. The bride departed in a printed cotton dress with a peach pink, woollen coat, and matching hat. Her corsage was of white orchids. They are residing at 16 Hotspur Road.

Yeshiva U. To Introduce Sephardic Studies Next Fall

Yeshiva University will introduce a new program of Sephardic Studies this fall in its Jewish study divisions, it was announced by Dr. Samuel Belkin, president. The program will be directed by Dr. Solomon Gaon, chief rabbi (Hacham) of the Sephardic Congregations of the British Commonwealth, and a visiting professor of practical rabbinics at the University's Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary. In announcing the undertaking, the first of its kind, Dr. Belkin said: "The purpose of the Sephardic Studies program is to help preserve the rich Sephardic-Jewish heritage and to train students of Sephardic background for positions of leadership, as rabbis, teachers, and communal leaders, in the Sephardic-Jewish community."

Rabbi Gaon will additionally establish an informational, educational, and cultural community service program for Sephardic congregations throughout the United States, Dr. Belkin said. Young men of Sephardic origin will be able to take special courses in the history, culture, and traditions of Sephardic Jewry, integrated into the regular studies at an undergraduate division of Yeshiva University, Yeshiva College for Men, the first liberal arts college under Jewish auspices; Teachers Institute for Men, which trains Hebrew teachers and administrators; and at Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary.

Dr. Gaon, who will head this new department, was appointed a visiting professor at Yeshiva University in November 1962. Born in Yugoslavia, he had lived in England since 1934, receiving his Ph.D. from the University of London in 1939. He is vice-chairman of the Rabbinical Commission of Great Britain; Deputy President of Jews College (London), where he was ordained in 1948; and "haham" of British Sephardic Jewry. ("Haham", meaning "wise", refers in Sephardic terminology to the head of the community).

Sephardic Jews now number about 15 per cent of the world's Jewish population. They are descended from the Spanish and Portuguese exiles of the late 15th century. Scattering to Holland, North Africa, Greece, Turkey, Syria, and Israel mainly, these Jews developed into heterogeneous groups, but still maintained common traits of language, religious custom, and general demeanor, which unified the separate elements and differed them from Eastern European, or Ashkenazic Jewry. Besides the Sephardic dialect of Hebrew, many spoke their own Spanish idiom of Ladino.

Sephardic Jews from Brazil were the first Jews to settle in America, in 1654. The main concentrations of Jews of Sephardic origin here now are to be found in New York City, Philadelphia, and Los Angeles. Sizeable Sephardic congregations are also in such cities as Atlanta, Georgia; Montgomery, Alabama; Seattle, Wash.; and Montreal, Canada.

The exodus of many Sephardic Jews from all parts of North Africa to France in recent years has resulted in that country's now possessing one of the largest Sephardic Jewish populations outside of the United States and Israel. London, England, maintains a large Sephardic community and Sephardic congregations exist in other parts of Europe as well as in Australia and Africa.

Yeshiva University, in New York City, is America's oldest and largest University under Jewish auspices, now in its 76th year. The University provides undergraduate, graduate, and professional studies in the arts, science, and Jewish learning leading to 18 different degrees and diplomas for more than 5,200 men and women. In addition to its extensive academic programs, Yeshiva University conducts a network of community service agencies; widespread research projects, and publishes several scholarly journals. Yeshiva University's Main Center is at Amsterdam Avenue and 186th Street, in Manhattan's Washington Heights section, with three other major teaching centers in mid-Manhattan and the Bronx.

MARRIAGES

BERGSON-BORNSTEIN

The marriage of Miss Harriet Bornstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Bornstein, 472 Bedford Park Avenue, to Frank Bergson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Bergson, 50 Wigan Crescent, was solemnized on June 9, at half-past five o'clock, at Shaarei Tefillah Synagogue, by Rabbi Bernard Rosensweig, with Cantor Sholom Markowitz. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her gown of white peau de faille had a fitted bodice; boat neckline; three-quarter-length sleeves; and an A-line skirt. There was lace applique and pearl headwork on the neckline, sides, sleeves, and chapel-length train. Her fingertip veil was of silk illusion, and topped by a flower of the same material as her gown; and she carried white orchids, and stephanotis on a prayerbook. Mrs. Murray Pollock, cousin of the bride, was matron of honour, wearing a long, sheath gown of yellow crepe; with a matching pill-box hat; and carrying a cascade bouquet of yellow roses. Miss Edith Bornstein, sister of the bride, the maid of honour, wore a long, bouffant gown of yellow organza; and a headdress of flowers of the same material, and veiling; and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses. The bridesmaids, were Misses Marcia Switzer, and Carol Simon, cousins of the bride. Each wore a long, bouffant gown of yellow organza; with headdress of flowers and veiling; and a cascade bouquet of yellow roses. Junior bridesmaids, for their cousin were Misses Susan Salcman, and Cheryl Pollock. Flower girls were Susan Sherman, aged five years; and Barbara Katz, aged seven, cousins of the bride. Each of the girls wore a long gown of yellow taffeta, overlaid in white eyelet; and had bands of yellow, baby roses in their hair. The junior bridesmaids had nosegays of yellow and white roses; and the flower girls carried baskets of white rose petals. Phillip Libsky was best man. The ushers were: Robert Bergson, Lorne Bergson, brothers of the groom; Samuel Bergson, Joel Shack, cousins of the groom; Irving Knopman, and Melvin Naiman. The ring-bearer was Barry Kerbel, aged eight years. The decorations in the Synagogue were done in yellow chrysanthemums, with white accents, and white satin bows at the pews. Following the ceremony, there was a dinner and three hundred guests were received in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Bornstein, mother of the bride, wore a long gown of cinnamon-coloured brocade; with a flowered hat to match; and had a wristlet of beige orchids. Mrs. Bergson, mother of the groom, wore a long, red gown; with a red hat; and a wristlet of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Bergson took a Caribbean cruise; and also visited New York, for their honeymoon. The bride went away in a turquoise-blue, sheath dress; with a matching duster; and had white gardenias. They will reside at 26 Carluke Crescent. Here for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Murray Pollock, of Hamilton, Ont., cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. J. Kalberman, of Alston, Mass., uncle, and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. H. Arbuck, and Linda, of Ottawa, Ont., uncle, and aunt of the groom; A. Steinberg, of Ottawa, Ont., cousin of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. C. Eisenberg, and Mr. and Mrs. I. Isenberg, of Windsor, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. L. Steinberg, Mr. and Mrs. B. Steinberg, Mr. and Mrs. J. Steinberg, A. Steinberg, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kevanstein, Mr. and Mrs. H. Zuckerman; all of Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. A. Benson, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Goldbach, all of Peterboro, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. B. Awerbak, of Windsor, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. B. Dworkin, of Kenmore, N. Y.

Countless Jews Mourn The Death Of Pope John XXIII

The World Jewish Congress American Section has sent a message on the death of Pope John XXIII to the Roman Catholic authorities in New York for transmission to the Vatican. The message was sent by Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, head of the W.J.C.'s International Affairs Department and Permanent Representative at the United Nations. It reads:

In the long history of the Jews no Christian leader has won the respect and affection of the Jewish people in the same measure as Pope John XXIII. When he acted, as he so often did, out of a compassionate understanding of the Jewish burden of suffering and disability, it was as though his human insight had divined the unspoken prayers of generations of Jews.

Illuminating all the acts and innovations which will mark his special place in contemporary history was his superb spiritual courage. He broke with the consecrated habits of centuries in the name of our common humanity, and in the same cause he sought to bridge the gulf which has divided men into hostile camps preparing for mutual destruction. He left the world a more hopeful place than he had found it, and gave a new authority to the ancient prophetic vision of a world of peace and justice which has sustained mankind in its darkest hours.

Countless Jews will mourn his passing as a personal loss but in the spirit of Jewish tradition they will give thanks for what he was and did. Like the faithful of his own Church, and indeed all men of good will, they will cherish his memory as a benediction.

Canadian Jewish Congress Resolution Expresses Sorrow Over Death Of Pope John XXIII

The Canadian Jewish Congress passed the following resolution on the death of Pope John XXIII, for transmission to the Vatican, at a meeting of its Officers Committee in Montreal. Michael Garber, Q.C., president of Congress, said:

"The Canadian Jewish Community is charged with deep emotion on the death of His Holiness Pope John 23 whose beneficent reign will illumine the pages of papal history. The Holy Father spared no effort in his desire to follow his fixed conviction that the forces of ethics, morality, and religion should permeate the thinking of all people of goodwill. His calling of the Ecumenical Council was an act of tremendous statesmanship and it is to be hoped that this be a lasting tribute to his memory."

Samuel Bronfman, chairman of the board of governors, and former president of Canadian Jewish Congress for many years, said:

"The Canadian Jewish community has special reason to mourn the loss of this eminent churchman because of his desire to improve the climate between various religions and to remove the tensions which have sadly developed between peoples of various religions. The Canadian Jewish Congress expresses its profound sense of loss and its condolences."

GERMAN REPORT SHOWS FEWER NAZIS; MORE NAZI PARTIES

Mr. Hoecherl states that international Fascism suffered considerable losses in 1962, and gives the following facts: 1) The Belgian Movement of Social Action was restricted by the Belgian police and courts; 2) Mosley and Jordan suffered setbacks in Britain; 3) most other European authorities acted against international Fascist groups; 4) Nazi finances suffered through the death of Swedish contributor, Carlberg.

Of the Nazi international organizations only the German Social Movement (DSB) of Kuglebiz, European Social Movement was [illegible] in existence and held its annual convention in Darmstadt in March 1962, with the participation of foreign visitors. Mr. Hoecherl had no evidence that Colin Jordan's and Lincoln Rockwell's so-called World Union of National Socialists had succeeded in establishing a German group, but in the fall of 1962, statements and leaflets with swastikas of this alleged German organization were received in Germany.

A "National Socialist Youth Association" in South West Africa tried to win German youth for its anti-Semitic and Nazi aims, falsely claiming that it had affiliated organizations and members in the Federal Republic. On the other hand, the German Minister admits, there could be no denial that there existed in West Germany indications of serious international endeavors to increase secret rightist concentrations. There were various contacts between German and foreign Nazis involving planning of international action and coordination of propaganda.

While German neo-Nazi movement membership decreased, the number of copies of printed publications rose from about 150,000 items in 1959, to 191,000 by the end of 1962. German action against the radical right in 1962 resulted in 54 persons being fined or sentenced to prison, and a number of nationalistic and anti-Semitic publications were forbidden.

Further information received by the World Jewish Congress but not included in the West German survey, indicates that certain of the banned Nazi movements had set up groups under other guises, some of them establishing links with Nazis in Argentina, the USA, South Africa, Australia, and European countries. "Young Europe," a Nazi movement with headquarters in Brussels, still lists a German affiliate, as well as affiliates in other European lands, and in South Africa.

tunities given to other nationalities. Except for a bi-monthly literary journal, Sovetish Heimland (Soviet Homeland), published in Moscow, and a few traveling folk singers and variety troupes, there are no activities identified with the Yiddish culture.

Unlike most Soviet nationalities, including Germans, who also are widely scattered throughout the country, says the New York Times, Jews have no nationally distributed newspaper, no elementary schools with instruction in their language, and virtually no literature.

Gives $1 Million For Brandeis U. Building

Charles C. Bassine, apparel industry executive of Great Neck, L. I., has given $1 million toward the cost of constructing a biology building in Brandeis University's proposed new science complex, to house the entire research activities of the University's Biology Department, and consist of laboratories and related facilities for use by the staff, undergraduate and graduate students.

It will be part of a science quadrangle that will include buildings primarily for research in biology, chemistry, mathematics, and physics, grouped around a plaza that will form the roof of a science library and lecture-demonstration auditorium. Construction of the quadrangle is expected to begin this summer.

Brandeis, in Waltham, Mass., which now has two major science buildings, is undertaking the new science complex in order to meet the demands of a fast-growing science program that has earned the University almost $5 million in current research grants chiefly from businesses, foundations, and government agencies. More than $560,000 of this total amount represents grants to the Biology Department from the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health. Brandeis' biological research covers a wide range of modern molecular biological approaches including developmental and genetic mechanisms of plants, animals, and microorganisms, metabolic, and enzymatic systems, comparative embryology, and radiation biology.

Charles C. Bassine is a former associate chairman of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, of New York; has been treasurer of the Great Neck Federation campaign for many years; also served as chairman of the United Jewish Appeal campaign there; is a treasurer of the Long Island Jewish Hospital; and a founder of the Albert Einstein Hospital. He is a vice chairman of the Fellows of Brandeis University, an elected group of men and women in the arts and sciences, in business and in industry, who have assumed major roles in its developments.
